

Chancellor, Vice Chancellor, distinguish guest, fellow graduates, university staff, family and friends. On behalf of the graduates receiving their awards today, we never thought this day would come! We prayed for its quick delivery, crossed days of our calendars, counted the hours, minutes, right to the second, now that its here, it feels bitter sweet. Bitter because I will be saying goodbye to great inspiring classmates, great professors, lecturers and tutors that has been great mentors and help shaped our lives.

Most of our journey started about 15-18 months ago, by making a big decision to do our MBAs. We are all so diverse with different background and work experiences, but we all have succeeded and today we are all here because we have the common determination and drive to succeed. For this I would like all of us to raise our right hand and give ourselves a pat on the back.

Today will be impossible if not for our families and friends. Our pillars of strength through this journey, you were the ones that has showered us with love and unconditional support. The times you tell us, everything will be fine, I am sure your presentation went well, event though you have no idea what on. On behalf of my fellow graduates, I would like all of us to put our hands together for all them. Thank you for believing in us and allowing us to live this dream.

Now if I may have ten super selfish seconds to say thank my parents there!
Mummy and naina I love you so much I am who I am because of your support!

So I have come to the end of my speech!

Fellow graduates, it's now time to look forward. The MBA has been a dream, a dream we have all fulfilled and today we stand here awoken and inspired to dream bigger! I am excited to see how far we all be going. I wish us all the best and good luck.

Thank you all!
